Force Protection

August 10, 2004 | 11:30 a.m.

Tulsa Air National Guard Base | Dining Hall - Building 240

Map and Directions to Meeting on next page

Engineering and Construction Camp

Craig Hunninghake

"I would like to thank the Tulsa Post for sponsoring my attendance at this camp. It was more than I imagined it would be and the experience of this camp will be with me forever."

Craig will talk about construction activities, recreational activities, build and design philosophy, and flight competition.

Reach Back Demonstration

Capt Bob Corrales

Jeff Powell of the Corps of Engineers' Engineer Research and Development Center will be demonstrating equipment used in the reachback capability currently employed today. Reachback capability allows for forward engineer teams in Afghanistan, Iraq and elsewhere to be able to tap into centers-of-expertise within the Corps, in real time.

Designing for Force Protection

Maj John Blickensderfer

1Lt Kurt Stephens

Presentation will provide guidelines and references for Anti-Terrorism Force Protection requirements within the Department of Defense. Criteria for design will be presented to include setback requirements, blast protection, security window film and an example of blast damage using computer-generated simulation.

Fast Start Development

Maj John Blickensderfer

- The purpose of the Fast Start plan is to assist federal, state, and local governments in recovery from natural and man-made disasters and emergencies. We will kick-off the update of the Tulsa Post plan during this meeting. Starting with the distribution of questionnaires for sustaining firms to provide data on their emergency response capabilities.

Oklahoma City

2004 Annual SAME Golf Tournament
will be September 10th -

Cutoff date for accepting applications is Sept. 5, 2004

Professional Engineer (P.E.) Exam Study Materials

The Tulsa Post currently has a civil engineering exam review video series available to members. The series contains 13 volumes covering all aspects of civil engineering likely to be covered on the P.E. exam. The videos contain relevant principles and practical examples although the video examples do not reflect the current multiple-choice format of the P.E. exam. Contact Clif Warren (918-669-7671) or David Steele (918-669-7008) if interested in checking out the videos.

Numerous organizations offer P.E. exam study materials that are reflective of the new P.E. exam format. The following websites contain information on study materials.

MxB Consulting, LLC

MxB Consulting is a new consulting firm providing civil engineering and drafting services. John Blickensderfer and Kelly McFarland founded this firm to fill the niche of small unique engineering projects to support a variety of clients. Many projects are too small for the typical consulting firm; however, ideal for MxB Consulting, LLC.

John Blickensderfer has over 20 years in the engineering community. Experience includes telecommunications, hydraulics and hydrology, site planning, structural engineering, dam safety analysis, transportation, survey engineering, contingency engineering, planning and programming, construction management, and project management.

Kelly McFarland has over 20 years in the steel industry ranging from designing, manufacturing, constructing, trouble shooting, and modifying steel structures. Highly knowledgeable of all recognized building codes and OSHA requirements in the region.

MxB Consulting can provide project management, site planning, foundation design, steel design, drafting services, construction management and inspection. Smaller projects are our specialty; however, we can team with other Architect-Engineer firms to support larger multi-discipline projects.
